

The Disturbing Reason Your Allergies Are Worse in The Morning

Do you wake up with sneezing, watery eyes, or a runny nose?

That's because you're not sleeping alone...

Every night, you lie down with thousands of crab-like, microscopic parasites called dust mites.

They don't bite, pinch, or burrow in your skin, but they're crawling all over your sheets and pillows.

That's why you sometimes wake up with watery eyes, a runny nose, or an itchy throat and cough.

As you sleep, you're breathing in their fecal pellets and body fragments.

DUST MITE ALLERGIES

Allergies, asthma, and a weak immune system have all been medically tied to the long-term impact of breathing in dust mite filth.
